Local longshoremen call four-day strike against mill

■ 'Wildcat' strike by local rice workers ends after agreement signed to cover seniority issues

By David Weller

The International Longshoreman's and Warehouseman's Union (ILWU) and the Farmer's Rice Cooperative (FRC) announced late Tuesday night that the four day wildcat strike at FRC is over. The strikers are expected to return to work Wednesday morning at 8:00 am.

In defiance of a contract they had earlier voted to ratify, 170 Longshoremen walked off their jobs at Farmer' Rice Cooperative on Saturday.

On Sunday the Union Local 17 directed the strikers to return to work, saying that the strike was illegal. But the FRC employee's continued to defy the Union's direction and the terms of the newly ratified contract until clarifications were made in the language which satisfied both sides.

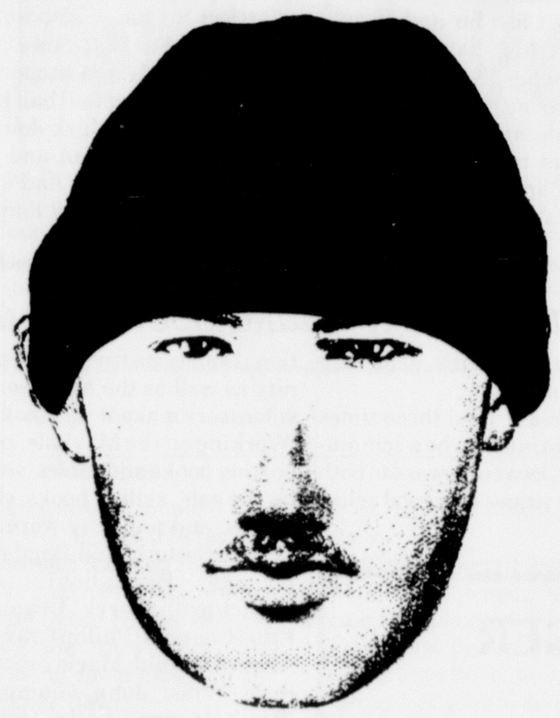

In a tightly controlled statement the Union and the FRC jointly announced that a letter of understanding had been signed by both parties and ratified by a majority of the striking workers.

At issue was the workers' fear that the original language in a locally negotiated addendum to the contract would erode their seniority rights.

In the statement, the Union negotiator stated that "The letter of understanding gives employees of ILWU local 17 the necessary clarifiation of contract language to give them comfort that their seniority rights will be maintained."

In the same statement, the FRC negotiator stated that "the language in the contract considered to be essential to FRC to successfully manage its business has been maintained."

West Sac bank is robbed

Artist's sketch of robbery suspect

By Steve Marschke

The Bank of America on West Capitol Avenue in West Sacramento was robbed on Wednesday, June 8.

Police say a male suspect entered the bank at about 4:20 p.m., "simulated a gun" with one hand and passed a bank employee a note. He escaped on foot with an undisclosed amount of money. It is unknown if he was indeed armed.

The man is described as 5' 6" tall, 130-140 pounds, with a thin moustache, dark hair and dark complexion. He is thought to be of Hispanic or East Indian descent, and was wearing a light blue, baggy denim shirt, denim jeans and a navy blue or maroon knit cap.

Anyone with information regarding the robbery is asked to call Detective Luna or Sergeant Mayoral at 373-5870 or 372-2461.

Wave of daylight burglaries hits

By Steve Marschke

West Sacramento's Broderick neighborhood (in the city's northeastern area) has been victimized by a number of daylight residential burglaries since May.

Police Lt. Ron Moore said that at least a dozen such burglaries have been committed during the past six weeks, on streets including Beardlsey, Joan, Anna, Sharion and Marston. In recent days, Douglas St., Welland Way and Kegle Ave have each seen at least one burglary as well.

"On one instance, people saw the individual going in to a house between 7:00 and 8:30 a.m.," Moore said. "They're breaking in several different ways. They attempt to twist the door handle, and if that doesn't work, they kick the door in."

Moore added that one burglary was interrupted by a house with a burglar alarm.

"We arrived within minutes and he jumped the fence and escaped us," said Moore.

The suspect was described as a male, about six feet tall, with very dark hair. Police aren't sure if one person is responsible for all the burglaries, but this suspect's description is the only one they currently have to work with.

Moore said many of the burglaries are timed to take place just after residents leave for work, and security can be improved by making sure each house has strong locks and doors.

"We'd be glad to set up neighborhood watches in different areas upon request," he added.

Residents are reminded that they may dial 9-1-1 to report an emergency, or may call the police at 372-2461 to report any suspicious activity in their neighborhood.

Anyone with possible information on the crimes is asked to call Sgt. Mayoral at 373-5870.

School trustees listen to student singers, hold low key meeting

By John Siden

Voters turned out the lights on school board president Hal Williams at the polls June 7, but two days later other forces were at work when a power outage brought an early end to the regular meeting of the school district trustees in City Council Chambers barely an hour into the meeting.

Before the outage, however, there was no hint of the controversies that have characterized the board's actions over the past two years, and no reference was made to the election and potential loss of power by the four-member majority whose actions focused community attention on the board.

Instead, the meeting started with a selection of songs from the "Sound of Music."

The musical excerpts, delivered in costume by reading students from Bryte elementary school under Doris Concklin and Teresa Ta, were learned in class by the students to improve reading skills. They received a standing ovation at the end by trustees and audience members.

The interruption caused the meeting to be continued until Monday, June 13, in the district board room. By the time the two-night meeting adjourned, the trustees:

■ Adopted an open enrollment policy which will permit district students to attend any school in the district, regardless of where they live, provided the district does not have to provide transportation;

■ Authorized roof and parking lot repairs totalling $68,000; purchase of a new driver training car for $13,000; and $31,000 Yolo High School library remodeling project.

■ Set aside $225,000 in unspent funds for future purchases of vehicles and classroom furnishings;

■ Received a $2,500 matching gift from Rotary Club of West Sacramento for Yolo High School's library/media center and a computer system from Don Johnson and Elizabeth Miller for the River City High School Special Education Department.

Two challengers defeat WUSD's only incument in election

■ New school board members and the man they beat are all optimistic on school district future

by David Weller

Beginning in July, Washington School District will see some significant changes in its governing board because of the outcome of last week's election. The solid four-member voting block led by board president Hal Williams will no longer exist, and the board will drop from seven members to five as the next term begins.

Of the four members who consistently voted in unison, the terms of Williams and Susan Carter will expire at the end of June. Carter did not seek re-election, and Williams was defeated by two professional educators, Nancy Candee and Ardeene Westvik.

Candee, who won the most votes, expressed pleasant surprise at doing so well. She also expressed a desire to see the board begin working toward a more cooperative spirit.

"Naturally I was kind of overwhelmed. It really touched me that so many people responded to what I was trying to say about the importance having a board that can work together," she said.

Among Candee's suggestions for changing the direction of the board are reinstatement into the California School Board Association, a school visitation program for board members, and more cooperation between the district and local newspapers in getting good news out to the public.

Candee is a half-time kindergarten teacher in Dixon. She has donated time to the Washington district as a classroom aid and as a member of the school site council at Westmore Oaks. "I'm getting my feet wet. I'm familiar with school issues, but of course I've never done this before," she said.

Westvik, who took second in the eight person race, is a retired school principal. She has served the district in a professional capacity for 30 years as a teacher and an administrator.

Like Candee, during the campaign Westvik expressed a desire to get the board reinstated into the California School Board Association. She also said during the campaign that she would like to she the board choose a specific area to concentrate on in the district, and work on getting really good at it. One area she suggested would be good to work on is primary reading skills.

As far as immediate goals for the board are concerned, Westvik has expressed a desire to slow down the decision-making process and study budgetary issues more carefully. "I would like to see us slow down a little bit in terms of some of the decisions the board has been making," she said. She included the proposed sale of district property as one of the proposals she would like to see studied further.

Williams expressed disappointment about his defeat, but he seems satisfied with his accomplishment in his two years on the board. "I feel that my brief stay on the board has been very rewarding and productive. We removed an incompetent adminstration and replaced it with an administrative team that will work hard for the best interests of the children," he said.

He also said he will continue to be involved in the education of his grandchildren, and that it is very important that the new administration has the support of the board majority.

"The important thing is that three board members will be returning who support the superintendent. I think things are going to work fine in spite of the outcome of this election," he said.

Second suspect in murder picked up nine years later

The Yolo County Sheriff's Department has announced that a fugitive from a 1985 Yolo homicide case has been captured in Columbia, Missouri last week, while officers there were conducting a routine check.

James Campbell, 46, is now in jail in Missouri and awaits extradition to Yolo County on murder charges.

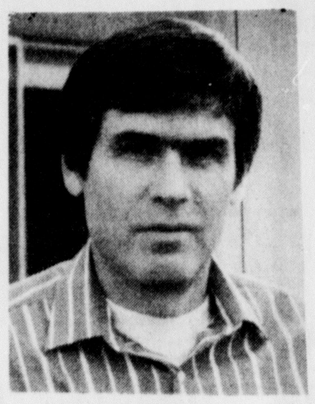

Campbell and Kenneth Roy Stark are believed responsible for the murder of Ronald Eugene Myers, found in 1985 in a rural field near the west end of the I-80 Causeway.

Stark was arrested on June 14, 1985 -- the day after the body of Myers was discovered -- and is currently serving time in state prison for second degree murder.

Both the F.B.I. and Yolo County Sheriff's Department have sought Campbell since 1985 as a fugitive who fled to evade arrest.

Packing away another season of little league memories

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

Another long little league season has come and gone, but this year I was at least smart enough to get my eight-year-old son, Kyle, on the Minor B Rockies, which was very capably managed and coached by Walt Cheechov and Mary Jo Bombardier. All I had to do was stand around and play at being the first base coach, which consisted mostly of yelling, "Run!" after one of our players hit the ball, and then congratulating anyone who safely reached the bag with a little pat on the rear-end.

Anyway, all the Rockies turned out to be fine ballplayers and I can't recall a single game when they didn't hustle and try hard to play the game to the very best of their ability.

More specifically, Casey Knight managed to harness all his boundless energy and become — pound for pound — the best second baseman in the league; Kevin Cheechov learned to play all of the skill positions and became our most versatile player; Gary Covert, Jr., gave every position a try and happily discovered that he was born to be a catcher; Max Elliott decided to turn things up a notch and ended up having a great second half; Yianni Georgalis got rid of his uppercut and started hitting the ball all over the lot; Michael Palamidessi kept his uppercut and I wouldn't be a bit surprised if in a few years he doesn't lead his major league team in home runs; Kyle Fisher finally learned that just because you're wearing sliding pads doesn't mean you have to slide at every single base; Justin Lucas decided that he wanted to be Royce Clayton instead of Barry Bonds and became such a good shortstop that he will never remember that there was a time when he couldn't keep his butt down and his hands forward; Neil Carter led the team in getting in — and out — of pickle plays and just about ruined my right wrist giving me "high-fives" every time he ran past first base; Karen Bombardier — who was far and away the prettiest Rockie — also worked hard on her hitting and had her best game of the year a few weeks ago; Andreas Anagnostopoulous somehow managed to hit more long foul ball home runs than anyone in the league; Mark Johnson turned out to be a fine third baseman and kept everyone on their toes because no one had a clue where he might throw a ball hit to him; and A.J. Saucedo learned to use two hands to catch the ball — if the coaches were looking.

Every year I have spent in little league has left me with a number of special memories. This year, two in particular come to mind. First, as Kyle and I prepared to go to our opening day Rockie game, I reminded him that he had to wear a jockstrap. "It's a new rule," I explained as I handed him the brand new undergarment I had bought him. "Everyone has to wear one of these things."

"But how do I put it on?" he asked with a puzzled expression as he swung it slowly back and forth in front of his eyes.

I quickly showed him which leg went where and said, "Now hurry up and get it on — we're going to be late."

About five minutes later, as I waited impatiently for him to come out of his bedroom, he finally threw open the door and strutted over to my rocking chair. "Ready to go?" I asked him without looking up from the sports page I was reading.

"Yep," he announced proudly, pounding a baseball into his glove.

I looked over at him and almost fell out of my chair with laughter. He had on his Rockie's uniform, alright, including his cap, his purple jersey with the number 3 on it, and a new pair of white baseball pants. But he had put his jockstrap on the outside of his pants, instead of the inside. "What's so darn funny?" he asked as I jumped up and raced off to find a camera.

"Don't you dare let him go to that baseball game looking like that!" my wife ordered me, knowing full-well the kind of insensitive father I can be at times. "His friends will never let him live it down."

"Oh, please?" I begged to no avail.

The second memory is even more special, because it goes the very heart of what sport in general, and youth sport in particular, is actually all about.

In our second to the last game, our left fielder, Yianni Georgalis, picked up a ball hit his way and for some reason known only to Yianni, decided to heave it all the way to first base. It went way over our first baseman's head and the other team scored a couple of unearned runs. When Yianni came off the field when the inning was over, he was in tears. "It's only a game, Yianni," I tried to explain, but Yianni was absolutely sure he had committed some terrible wrong that had really hurt his team. Then, just when I had run out of anything constructive to say, Justin Lucas, our shortstop, stepped up to his teammate and said softly, "It's okay, Yianni — I throw the ball over the first baseman's head all the time. Everyone makes mistakes — it's no big deal. Come on — don't worry about it." He put his arm around Yianni's shoulder and — still consoling him — walked him all the way back to the dugout.

As I watched the two of them step away from me, I was reminded once again that what kids really need in their lives is not more baseball game victories and championship little league seasons. What they really need is to be blessed with parents like John and Sally Lucas.

The New York Knicks and the Houston Rockets are locked in a low scoring battle for the NBA title. The Rockets lead the best-of-seven series two to one, but with games four and five in New York, this championship will go back to Houston and be decided in the final game. The Knicks can win this series if they keep playing half-court basketball and keep up the intense defense on Houston's shooting guards.

The Giants (29-34) are in a tail spin that has dropped them into third place in the Western Division. Last in batting and runs scored, the Giants are looking into a trade after right fielder Willie McGee had surgery to repair a torn Achilles tendon. Rumors have ex-Dodger Darryl Strawberry or ex-Brave Ron Gant being signed after the All-Star break.

The A's are still hanging in there despite the poor pitching from the starters. Luckily, the A's (19-43) are in a very weak division, trailing first place by 12 games.

Mark McGwire may return next weekend!

Can you believe Cubs All-Star second baseman Ryne Sandberg is retiring at the young age of 34 and walking away from $16 million in guaranteed money!!

The 49ers signed 33-year old defensive end Richard Dent to a two-year contract. The ex-Bear will bring to the Niners defense that outside pass rush that should bring them closer to another Super Bowl.

Speaking of football, the CFL Gold Miners open the pre-season on Saturday, June 18 at 7:30 p.m. at Hornet Field against Calgary.

World Cup Soccer begins on June 17 in Chicago, with the defending champion team Germany against Bolivia. The final 24 teams have been divided into six groups of four teams. After each team plays the others in its group, 16 will advance to the second round, when the tournament becomes single elimination.

The U.S. team's first game is against Switzerland on June 18, and will be shown on ESPN at 8:30 a.m.

The Sacramento Knights Indoor Soccer home opener is Thursday, June 16 at 7:30 p.m. against San Jose at the Arco Arena.

See ya next week!

Yolo celebrates Mexican heritage

Fiesta at the Museum, featuring an afternoon and evening of dancing, music, and other entertainment, will accompany the opening of an exhibit on Saturday, June 18, at the Yolo County Historical Museum depicting the Spanish and Mexican contributions to Yolo County History and calling attention to the Mexican heritage in Yolo County.

The exhibit, including family photos, folk and contemporary Mexican art, souvenirs, and other artifacts, will open at 2 p.m., with festivities continuing until 8 p.m. on the museum grounds at 512 Gibson Road in Woodland. Admission is free.

Vendors of ethnic foods and artifacts will set up their booths on the museum grounds. Alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages will be available during the afternoon and evening.

Mexican pioneers of Yolo County; the Pena, Vaca, and Berryessa families, who arrived in the 1840's and 1850's in what is now Yolo County, will be highlighted in a special section of the exhibit.

"The exhibit is the first of that kind at the museum, and hopefully will evolve into a tradition of creating similar exhibits in the future," says Monika Stengert, museum curator.

"We will also start an historical file at the museum of documents and photographs relating to Mexican-American families in Yolo County who settled here between the 1850's and the 1960's."

Vendors interested in renting booth space should call Rachel Mallery at 662-8181.

Will new school board mean a fresh start?

Controversial school board president Hal Williams is now on the way out, thanks to a decisive loss at the polls to two challengers who were backed by the local teachers' association and others.

It would be a mistake to assume that the vote was a victory for one "faction" of school district politics over another. And it would be a mistake for a new school board majority to assume it has carte blanche to do all the things that couldn't be done under the old majority, without regard for consensus or fair play.

Defeat of board president is a sign that the voters are tired of school board infighting and petty politics.

Williams entered this election campaign with more name recognition than any other candidate, and probably spent more money in the campaign. So his rejection at the polls clearly meant something, but what that "something" was goes beyond Hal Williams as a person.

Certainly, many voted in favor of the other candidates because they liked them or because they disliked Williams. But if there was a single underlying tone to the public's view of this school board race, it was that the public was sick and tired of the strife and infighting of the previous school board. More than anything, they voted for some new faces because they believed Williams to be a big part of this big problem.

The new board would be wise to keep this in mind. If board members can't find a way to work together to get something done and raise district morale, they will end up facing the same voter sentiments Williams did. The time for infighting is past.

Now is a good time for some introspection among school board members. If there is any among them still so filled with hate from old battles that they can not work with every other member of the board in a productive manner, then he or she should step down.

Because this time around, the public wants some professionalism.

Commentary: racial justice act would gut the death penalty

by Attorney General Daniel Lungren

I am sending a warning signal to the people of California: Our death penalty law is under serious attack by events now taking place in Washington, D.C.

The "Racial Justice Act," which was narrowly included by the House of Representatives as part of the omnibus crime bill, is nothing more than a trap door for the death penalty. The act, which is opposed by the Senate, would allow convicted death row inmates to use statistical showings from cases totally unrelated to their own to challenge their sentences. Under this legislation, inmates would be allowed to use such unrelated statistics to infer on appeal that considerations of race may have improperly caused a disparity in determining which persons are charged with death penalty eligible murder, or are convicted of murder with special circumstances (allowing for a jury-imposed sentence of death).

If this bill were subject to truth-in-advertising standards it would more accurately be called the "Death Penalty Abolition Act of 1994" or the "Capital Punishment by Quota Act of 1994."

Death row inmates could 'shop' for the best statistics to use to get them off the hook.

All 58 California district attorneys and over 30 state attorney generals have joined me in opposing the "Racial Justice Act."

While it may sound noble, the "Racial Justice Act" would overturn the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling in McCleskey v. Kemp (1987), in which the court ruled that a defendant who contests his death sentence on the basis of racial discrimination is required to prove that they jury in his or her own case improperly considered racial factors in determining the sentence. By overturning McCleskey, the "Racial Justice Act" would allow death row inmates "to go statistics shopping" in an effort to find the most favorable statistical studies from unrelated cases on which to base new appeals.

California has had experience with a racial justice act type of claim, in the early Lloyd Jackson case. Jackson, convicted and sentenced to death for two brutal murders or elderly women in Long Beach in 1977, claimed in a 1984 habeas corpus appeal that the death penalty in California was being discriminatorily imposed based on the defendant's race, the victim's race, and the defendant's gender.

After three years and $1 million in prosecution costs incurred by the state in preparation for a court-ordered evidentiary hearing, and with more preparation needed, Jackson's claim became moot when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in McCleskey.

Robert Alton Harris, who was executed in 1992, attempted to make similar statistical claims of discrimination in his case, based on the fact that his two teenage victims were white, which allegedly influenced the jury to sentence Harris to death. Harris also tried to bring similar statistical claims based on his gender and age.

What's missing in all this legal intricacy is obvious: The facts about the crime, and the victims and their families who pay the price. The "Racial Justice Act" would bring upon even more delay and litigation in death penalty cases — an unbearable thought for the families of murder victims who are already forced to endure up to 10 years or more of legal wrangling before there is even a chance for closure and finality.

A federal crime bill is supposed to be tough on crime. The last thing we need to do is give death row inmates even more chances at appeal and delay. The "Racial Justice Act" would do just that.

Letters to the Editor

Congratulations

I would like to extend my warmest congratulations to Ardeene Westvik and Nancy Thompson-Candee on their recent election to the Washington Unified School District board of trustees. These are two educated and qualified people who I am quite confident will be an asset in their new position.

These two individuals from the beginning of the campaign had two main goals. One was to win a seat on the school board and the other was to defeat the incumbent, Hal Williams, at any cost.

They accomplished their goals, but they may have compromised their integrity by accepting large campaign contributions from the Washington Teachers Assocation. During this campaign I questioned the objectivity and integrity of Mr. Williams because he had accepted campaign contributions from "special interest" companies. We need to expect the same high level of integrity from any person who holds a public office.

An endorsement from the WTA would not question the integrity of these two individuals, but by accepting their financial support places a dark shadow over the relationship between the WTA and our two new school board members. These types of contributions are common from lobbyists at the state and federal levels of government, but suggests a conflict-of-interest at the local level.

I would also like to set the record straight as far as campaign contributions and expenditures. It has been published in both papers that only Williams and myself have raised and/or spent over $1000.00. This is not accurate. Mr. Williams, according to public records, spent over $1800.00. All of it from contributions to his campaign. I spent just under $1300.00. All of it, except a $20 donation, was my own money.

I was just informed two days after the election that both Westvik and Thompson-Candee have surpassed $1000.00 in spending and/or contributions. According to papers filed by Thompson-Candee, the date contributions and/or expenditures reached $1000 was on June 1, 1994, one week prior to the election. Since I have yet to see Westvik's papers, I will conclude they are similar to those of Thompson-Candee.

There were many isses raised during this campaign. A new elementary school in Southport, a new high school for the district, safety in our schools, a unified school board, and the list goes on. These are not easy tasks to accomplish, but I wish our new school board members, and those already on the board, only the best and pledge my support in making Washington Unified School District an entity of which we can all be proud.

MICHAEL S. GUILIANO
West Sacramento

(Editor's note: The campaign money information we printed was the information available at the time it was printed; candidates who broke the $1,000 barrier first were reported earliest. A final campaign financing update on all candidates will be published in an upcoming issue.)
